Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 1600 on Wednesday 21 Apr 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
Most areas fine and dry with plenty of sunshine tomorrow.

This Evening and Tonight:
Residual daytime cloud will thin and disperse this evening leaving a dry night with mostly clear skies. It will quickly become chilly this evening and then a colder night than last night will follow with widespread ground frost.

Thursday:
After a chilly start, most areas will be dry and sunny. Cloudier for the far north of Scotland though. Warmer than today, especially in the east. Breezy in the south.

Outlook for Friday to Sunday:
Dry for most with sunny spells but still some overnight frost. Windy across the far southwest. Some showers likely across parts of Scotland later on Sunday.
